ABSTRACT

Morpheme is one of grammatical unit in linguistics. Both in English and Bahasa Indonesia, morpheme is divided into two groups; they are free morpheme and bound morpheme. In translation field, the bound morpheme is often translated into different grammatical unit in target language so it is often make a question that translation is having equivalences each other or not. The object of analysis of this research is bound morphemes used in the novel of The Hound of the Baskerville by Arthur Conan Doyle. Moreover, data analysis of this research is bound morpheme shifts and its translation occurred in translated version of the novel above. This research intends to explain shifts and equivalences in target language of the novel above.

Method of collecting data in this research is reading technique which is reading, scrutinizing, and noting. To examine types of shift of each morpheme, the writer uses the theory of shift in translation by Catford. Then, to examine equivalences in the translation, the writer uses dictionaries to prove it.

The result of this research shows that there are one hundred seventy (170) cases of shift of grammatical unit from bound morpheme to word and form bound morpheme to phrase. The bound morphemes which experience grammatical unit shifts are the bound morpheme re- in-, im-, un-, dis-, ir-,-ly, - less, -es/-s, -est, -er, -ist, -able/-ible, and -ous.

Key words: translation, equivalence, bound morpheme.

ABSTRAK

Morfem merupakan salah satu dari unit gramatikal dalam ilmu linguistik. Dalam Bahasa Inggris maupun Bahasa Indonesia morfem dibagi menjadi dua bagian, yaitu morfem bebas dan morfem terikat. Dalam penerjemahn, morfem terikat seringkali diterjemahkan dalam tataran unit gramatikal yang berbeda pada bahasa target sehingga sering menimbulkan pertanyaan apakah terjemahan itu sepadan satu sama lain atau tidak. Objek penelitian skripsi ini adalah morfem terikat yang digunakan dalam novel The Hound of the Baskerville karya Arthur Conan Doyle. Sedangkan data penelitian ini adalah pergeseran morfem dan terjemahnannya yang terdapat dalam versi terjemahan novel di atas. Penelitian ini bertujuan untuk menjelaskan perubahan-perubahan dan padanan terjemahan dalam target bahasa novel tersebut.

Metode pengumpulan data pada penelitian ini adalah teknik membaca, yaitu dengan membaca, simak, dan kemudian mencatat. Untuk mengetahui jenis perubahan yang terjadi pada setiap morfem, penulis menggunakan teori pergeseran dalam terjemahan dari Catford. Untuk mengetahui padanan dalam terjemahan tersebut, penulis menggunakan kamus sebagai pembuktiannya.

Hasil penelitian ini menunjukkan bahwa terdapat 170 kasus pergeseran unit gramatikal dari morfem terikat ke kata dan dari morfem terikat ke frase. Morfem terikat yang mengalami pergeseran unit gramatikal adalah morfem terikat re- in-, im-, un-, dis-, ir-,-ly, -less, -es/-s, -est, -er, -ist, -able/-ible, dan - ous.

Kata kunci: penerjemahan, padanan, morfem terikat

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background of Study

The world consists of many people who have different cultures, traditions, languages, and life styles. Those differences make human beings need an access to know about information each other so they can adopt something good from it. The access is such as learning of language, especially in translation studies.

People need information and educations to compete with others in living their life. Information can be gotten from variety of sources such as from magazines, educational books, newspapers and others. Nevertheless, sometimes those sources are created in different languages and therefore those languages need to be reproduced in other languages. Here is one of the functions of translation. People can get and share any information to many people around the world by translating a text from source language (SL) to target language (TL). So, it can be said that translation is important for people.

Translation can give other benefits for people. One of them is, that it can give useful information to other people. In Islam, a Muslim is obligated to share his or her information or knowledge to other people. It is mentioned in the Noble Qur'an in Surah Al Maeda verse 67 (sixty-seven):

﴿ يَكَأَيُّهَا الرَّسُولُ بَلِغٌ مَا أُنزِلَ إِلَيْكَ مِن رَّيِكٌ وَإِن لَمْ تَفْعَلْ هَا بَلَغْتَ رِسَالَتَهُ وَاللَّهُ يَعْصِمُكَ مِنَ النَّاسِ إِنَّ اللَّهَ لَا يَهْدِى الْقَوْمَ الْكَفِينِ نَ ﴿ اللَّهُ لَا يَهْدِى الْقَوْمَ الْكَفِينِ نَ ﴿ اللَّهُ لَا يَهْدِى الْقَوْمَ الْكَفِينِ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ لَا يَهْدِى الْقَوْمَ الْكَفِيدِينَ ﴿ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ لَهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ لَا يَهْدِى الْقَوْمَ الْكَفِيدِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَا اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللللللللِّلْمُؤْمِنَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللللللِيْفُومُ الللِي الللللِيْمُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْ

"O Messenger! Make known that which hath been revealed unto thee from thy Lord, for if thou do it not, thou wilt not have conveyed His message. Allah will protect thee from mankind. Lo! Allah guideth not the disbelieving folk" (Al Maeda (s): 67).

From this ayah, it can be interpreted that a Muslim is obligated to convey information mandated to other people. It becomes a lofty thing when people can share information or knowledge each other. One of manners to share them is by translating a text. Sharing knowledge or information by translating seems similar as a teacher makes his or her student to be a smart person or knowing something and it is one of the sublime actions.

"Translation is an operation performed on language; a process of substituting a text in one language for a text in another" (Catford, 1965:1). It means that translation is process or action of reproducing a language from source language to target language. Here, someone who translates a language to other languages called as translator.

Every language around the world has its own system and language unit and therefore a translator has to know well about language translated by him or her. If a translator does not know about them, it can create confusion to readers. It can happen because they do not understand what the writer means even it may bring readers to wrong understanding of text translated.

The interesting cases can be gotten in translation field especially in product of translation such as translated novel. In translated novel, there are some cases can be found including shifts in translation. One of those cases is shifts in translation. Thus, this research intends to analyze the translation cases in translated novel especially about shifts in translation.

To limit the analysis, this research focuses on bound morpheme shifts occur in the novel. A bound morpheme shift is that a shift of bound morpheme occurs from SL translated to TL in process of translation. That shift is the unit of morpheme itself and it can be shift from morpheme to word, morpheme to phrase, and others. Shift in translation can be rank-up or rank-down. Rank-up shift is a shift of rank in TL is higher than SL such as shift from a word in SL to a clause in TL. Rank-down shift is a shift of rank in TL is lower than SL such as shift from a clause in SL to a word in TL.

This research uses theory of unit shift in translation to analyze the bound morpheme shifts occur in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville, the subject of analysis in this research. It is because many cases of bound morpheme shifts can be found in this novel. This research intends to show some interesting cases from this novel. The cases are gotten from the morphemic branches such as prefixes (im-, in-, dis-, un-, re-, and etc) and suffixes (-s, -ly, -able/ible, -less, -ist -ing, etc).

This research applies the method of descriptive-inferential analysis. This method is proposed by Kothari and it is used as the way to analyze the cases found. A sample of morphemic shifts that happen in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville is provided below;

-dis (SL)	tidak (TL)
'And you go in dis grace. (Page 151)	"Dan kau dipecat dengan tidak
	hormat. (Page 189)

A case of unit shift happens in the sample above. It is a shift of bound morpheme to word. The shift can be seen from unit bound morpheme dis- in SL that is translated into unit word tidak in TL.

This research intends to prove the equivalences of unit shift in translation by using dictionaries. The complete analysis is put in the chapter III of this research. This research focuses on the shifts of bound morphemes occur in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville.

The reasons of choosing The Hound of the Baskerville novel by Arthur Conan Doyle as the subject of analysis are because of the quality and the values of this novel. This novel was listed as number 128 of 200 on the BBC's The Big Red poll of the UK's as "best loved novel" in 2003. Then, in 1998, it was listed as the top Holmes novel, with a rating from Sherlockian scholars 100 of 100 (en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Hound_of_the_Baskervilles). Then, story of this novel has some values. This story can influence the readers to be a positive thinker, a critical thinker, and not easy to believe for uncorroborated things. Characters of Sherlock Holmes and Watson represent these values in this novel.

The Hound of the Baskerville novel has translated into Bahasa Indonesia and Dina Begum translates it. She is a translator and has work experience for 16 years in a library owned by a British Organization in Jakarta. She gets Diploma degree in Librarianship Science Bogor Agriculture University in 1991. Her specialization in translating is from English to Bahasa Indonesia and from English to Sundanese. Dina Begum focuses on translating for book fiction and nonfiction, culture, education, film, environment, and others. She works as translator since 2008. Moreover, she is a member of Himpunan Penerjemah Indonesia-HPI (The Association of Indonesian Translator).

The Hound of the Baskerville novel tells about a couple of detectives who are Watson and Sherlock Holmes; they assist the Baskerville family to solve a mystery of Sir Charles Baskerville's death. His death is considered as unusual because Sir Charles' corpse is so ghastly and many people presume that he dies caused by the hound in the Baskerville. Nevertheless, Watson and Holmes do not believe it and they attempt to find out it together. They go to the Baskerville while keeping Sir Henry, last generation of Baskerville family because he is known as next target of murderer. Finally, Watson and Holmes are success to find the murderer, he is Mr. Stapleton a neighbor of Baskerville. He has a huge hound that is used to kill Sir Charles and seizes for wealth of Baskerville family. The last, Watson and Holmes prove that the death of Sir Charles is not caused by a mystic thing.

1.2 Problem Statements

- 1. How are the bound morpheme shifts that occur in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville?
- 2. What bound morpheme shifts are most dominant to occur in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville?

1.3 Objectives of Study

- to describe the bound morphemes shifts in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville.
- 2. to find out which bound morpheme shifts are most dominant to occur in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville.

1.4 Significances of Study

The analysis of this research has some significances both theoretically and practically. Theoretically, this analysis is useful to enlarge and to increase knowledge of readers in translation field especially in two different languages, English and Bahasa Indonesia. Besides, the analysis of this research can be also as a reference for those who are interested in learning about the translation.

Practically, this analysis has usefulness for teaching and training about translation.

1.5 Literature Review

This research selects the bound morpheme shifts in novel as object of analysis. This research has also similarities both objective of study and theory used with some other theses. The first prior research gotten is a thesis by Novie Andriani Kesuma, 2010 from University of North Sumatera entitled "The Morphemic Shift in Translation of John Shors' Beneath a Marble Sky into Taj Mahal by Meithya Rose." In her thesis, she analyzes the morphemic shifts and finds the most dominant of morphemic shifts occur in the novel. She categorizes kinds of bound morphemes into prefixes and suffixes. She analyzes also the shifts of morphemes to words and morphemes to phrases. The result is she finds the morphemic shifts of changes from morphemes to words and from morphemes to phrases that occur in prefixes un-, im-, re-, dis-, under-, out-, a-, extra-, and over-. The morphemic shifts occur also in the suffixes -ing, -ly, -s, -er, -less, -est, and -ed.

The second prior research is the thesis by Robby Hamdanur, 2011 from University of North Sumatera entitled "An Analysis of Unit Shifts in the Translation of Agatha Christie's The Mystery of the Blue Train into Misteri Kereta Api Biru by Nyonya Suwarni A.S." Robby provides the analysis of unit shifts in translation. He categorizes them from morphemes to words, words to phrases, words to clauses, words to sentences, phrases to clauses, phrases to sentences, etc. Then, he calculates how many morphemic shifts happen in the novel. The result is he finds 389 cases of unit shifts in the novel. They are shifts from morpheme to word, shifts from word to morpheme, shifts from word to phrase, shifts from word to clause, shifts from word to sentence, shifts from phrase to word, shifts from phrase to clause, shifts from phrase to sentence, shifts from clause to word, shifts from clause to phrase, shifts from clause to sentence, shifts from sentence to word, shifts sentence to phrase, and shifts from sentence to clause.

The third prior research is the thesis by Elisa Hari Septi Simanjuntak, 2010 from University of North Sumatera entitled "An Analysis of Word Shifts in Sherlock Holmes' Movie Subtitle." In her thesis, she analyzes the unit shifts from movie subtitle and counts how many shifts happen in it. The result of her analysis is, that she finds 128 word shifts containing three types of rank change. They are shifts from word to phrase (W-P), word to clause (W-C), and word to sentence (W-S). Moreover, there are 115 cases of shifts from word to phrase (W-P), 12 cases of shifts from word to clause (W-C), and 1 case of shifts from word to sentence (W-S).

The fourth prior research is a thesis written by Kadek Yogi Suasana in 2013 from Udayana University. Its title is "Shift in Translation of Locative Prepositional Phrases with Reference to Steve Jobs Biography". He analyzes about the shifts of locative prepositional phrase and only focuses on analyzing the preposition 'at', 'in', and 'from'. He applies some theories in analyzing the data, like theory of translation proposed by Larson, translation equivalent by Nida in Venuti, preposition by Quirk and shifts in translation by Catford. The result of his anlaysis, he finds shifts in translation both level shift and category shift in the data analysis. Then, category shift consists of structure shift, class shift, unit shift, and intra-system shift.

The last prior research is a thesis written by Sonny Primadani Hasanuddin in 2012 from Yogyakarta State University. Its title is "Rank Shift in English-Bahasa Indonesia Subtitle of King's Speech Movie". He analyzes about rank shifts occur in King's Speech English-Bahasa Indonesia subtitle. As the result, he finds that from 293 sentences of rank shifts, 290 sentences are equivalent in meaning or 99%. The equivalent meaning is divided into three degree, which is full meaning (93.9%), increased meaning (1%), and decreased meaning (4.1%). Non-equivalent meaning that occurs only 3 sentences of rank shifts, or about 1%. The non-equivalent meaning is divided into two degree that are full different meaning (1%) and no-meaning (0%).

The similarity among this research and five prior researches above can be seen in the object of analysis. The researchers choose the same object; it is shifts in translation. Nevertheless, there are some differences in these theses; they are the subject of analysis. This research uses the translation of The Hound of the Baskerville novel as the subject of analysis and focuses on the bound morpheme shifts. It means that the focus is similar with the first prior researche but she uses the translation of Beneath of Marble Sky novel. The second prior research uses the translation of novel The Mystery of the Blue Train as the subject of analysis. The writer of the third prior research uses the subtitle of Sherlock Holmes' movie as the subject of her analysis. The fourth prior research uses Steves Jobs Biography as the subject of anlaysis. Moreover, the last prior research uses King's Speech movie subtitle as the subject of analysis.

In addition, the writer of the first prior research collects the data by observing closely the morphemes in SL and TL, and also by reading repeatedly and analyzing them. She applies the qualitative method in her analysis. The writer of second prior research applies the purposive sampling as the method of data collecting and descriptive-qualitative method as the method and type of his research. The data of the third prior research are collected by collecting the transcript of Sherlock Holmes' movie subtitle. She applies qualitative method in her research. The fourth prior research applies qualitative research as the type of research and collects the data by using observation method. Then, he analyzes the data by using translational identity method or comparing one language to other languages. The last prior research apllies the qualitative research as type of research and collects the data by reading repeatedly. He applies also the descriptive method as the method of analyzing data. Nevertheless, this research collects the data by reading, observing, and noting the morphemic shifts that happen in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville novel. Then, this research applies the qualitativequantitative method and descriptive-inferential analysis as the type research and the method of analyzing data. All the researchers above use Catford's theory about unit shift in analyzing the data.

In conclusion, those five prior researches are taken to get comparison and input to this research. All the prior researches above have similar object to this research that is the analysis of shifts happen in translation. The subject of analysis of this research makes difference with three prior researchers above. Moreover, this research is focused on analyzing the morphemic shifts and finding out the most dominant of morphemic shifts in the translation of The Hound of the Baskerville novel.

1.6 Theoretical Approach

This research focuses on analyzing and observing bound morpheme shifts in the translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskerville novel. To answer the questions mentioned in the problem statements. This research uses some theories related to the questions.

The first theory used is theory of shifts in translation, the unit shift precisely. Catford states that there are two major types of shift; they are level shift and category shift (1965:73). Moreover, the category shift is divided into four types. They are structure shift, class shift, unit shift (rank change), and intra-system shift.

1. Structure shifts are amongst the most frequent category shift at all rank in translation (1965:77).

- 2. Class shifts occur when translation equivalent of a SL item is a member of a different class from the original item (1965:78).
- 3. Unit shift (rank shift) is a change of rank-that is, departures from formal correspondence in which the translation equivalence of a unit at one rank in the SL is a unit at a different rank in the TL (1965:79).
- 4. Intra-system shifts is a case where SL and TL possess systems which approximately correspond formally as to their constituent, but when translation involves selection of a non-corresponding term in the TL system (1965:80).

In this research, the writer uses Catford's theory of unit shift.

Then, to find out the answer of second problem statement, this research uses the formula to find out the mean. It is used to find out the most dominant bound morpheme shifts occur in this novel. Butler says that "the mean is what the layman means by an 'average'" (1985: 27).

$$\frac{N}{\sum X} \times 100\%$$

N = Number of each type of bound morpheme shifts

 $\Box X = \text{Total number of bound morpheme shifts}$

1.7 Method of Study

1.7.1 Type of Research

Based on type of analyzing the data, this research applies the qualitative and quantitative research since the data is analyzed by explaining descriptively and statistically. Kothari (2004:3) says that "qualitative research is concerned with qualitative phenomenon, i. e., phenomenon relating to or involving quality or kind". Whereas, quantitative research can be said as a research related to the measurement of quantity or amount and it can be explained statically or in terms of quantity (Kothari, 2004:3).

1.7.2 Data Sources

The writer takes data source from the novel by Arthur Conan Doyle entitled The Hound of the Baskerville and its translation Sherlock Holmes & Anjing Iblis dan Keluarga Baskerville by Dina Begum. The source language (SL) is English and the target language (TL) is Bahasa Indonesia. The data analyzed are the words that have bound morphemes combination.

1.7.3 Data Collection Technique

There are seven techniques of collecting data based on Ratna. They are technique of sampling, observation, interview, documentation, questioner, triangulation, and reading. Nevertheless, this research applies technique of reading as method of collecting data. Ratna (2010:246) says that "technique of reading is scrutinizing and reading the data, and then continued by noting". It can be called shortly as reading, scrutinizing, and noting or baca, simak, dan catat (BSC) in Bahasa Indonesia. In collecting the data, the following steps are applied:

a) Identifying the source language (SL) data that consist of bound morphemes then underline them.

- b) Identifying the target language (TL) data that consists of bound morpheme shifts then underline them.
- c) The data gotten from source language (SL) and target language (TL) are put together side by side.

1.7.4 Data Analysis Technique

In analyzing the data, this research applies the descriptive and inferential analysis method proposed by Khotari. Kothari (2004:5) says that "descriptive research is concerned with describing the characteristics of a particular individual or of a group. It is concerned with specific predictions, with narration of fact and characteristics concerning individual, group, or situation." Then, inferential analysis is known as statistical analysis. "It is concerned with the estimation of population values. It is mainly on the basis of inferential analysis that the task of interpretation" (Kothari, 2004:131). The analysis of this research is arranged to be the descriptions and the calculations of data analysis. In analyzing the data gotten, the following steps are applied:

- a) Looking for the bound morphemes from the SL and TL
- b) Comparing the data of the source language and target language
- Classifying and analyzing the data based on the type of bound morpheme shifts
- d) Finding out the most dominant morphemic shift in the translation of the source language
- e) Drawing the conclusion

1.8 Paper Organization

This research is divided into four chapters. The first chapter consists of introduction. The contents are background of study, problem statements, objectives of study, significances of study, literature review, theoretical approach, method of study, and paper organization. The second chapter consists of description of theoretical background. Moreover, this chapter contains of translation theories such as definition of translation, functions of translation, shifts in translation, and about five ranks of grammatical unit.

The third chapter consists of research finding and data analysis. The data analysis are discussed by using the theory of translation proposed by Catford to describe the bound morpheme shift occur in the translation of subject used. Then, there are also the lists of morphemic shifts that occur in the translation of subject analyzed to find out bound morpheme shift that are most dominant to occur in this novel. The last chapter consists of conclusion and suggestion.

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

4.1 Conclusion

After analyzing the shifts of bound morpheme translated into words and phrases gotten from the SL and its translation in TL in Bahasa Indonesia, the writer is able to draw some conclusions. From the novel of The Hound of the Baskerville by Arthur Conan Doyle and its translation Sherlock Holmes & Anjing Iblis dan Keluarga Baskerville translated by Dina Begum, the writer finds one hundred seventy (170) shifts of bound morpheme that are included the shifts from a morpheme to a word and from a morpheme to a phrase.

From these one hundred seventy (170) cases of bound morpheme shifts containing of 15 kinds of bound morpheme translated into words and phrases in TL, the writer finds that these shifts contain of 7 prefixes and 8 suffixes. In addition, by using the formula to find out the mean, the writer can find that the shift occurrence of prefix re- is 3 cases (1.8 %), in- is 15 cases (8.8 %), im- is 5 cases (2.9 %), un- is 43 cases (25.3 %), dis- is 5 cases (2.9 %), ir- is 2 cases (1.2 %), and mis- is 1 case (0.6 %). Then, the shift occurrence of suffix -ly is 42 cases (24.7 %), -est is 8 cases (4.7 %), -less is 19 cases (11.2 %), -es is 4 cases (2.3 %), -er is 19 cases (11.2 %), -ist is 1 case (0.6 %), -able is 2 cases (1.2 %), and -ous is 1 case (0.6 %). From that calculation, the writer can decide that the most dominant of bound morpheme shift that occur in the translation of The Hound of The Baskerville is prefix un- with 43 cases (25.3 %). Then, the lowest shift of bound morpheme in the TL is prefix -mis, suffix -ist, and -ous, with 1 case (0.6 %).

From the analysis, the writer can conclude that shifts in translation cannot be considered as a mistake but it happens in translation in order to create suitability or equivalence between the SL and TL. Then, a text that is translated by a translator in TL can be considered by the readers as equivalent or non-equivalent in meaning. One of the ways to consider the equivalence in meaning of a text translated is the readers can prove that equivalence by using the dictionary or comparing the quality meaning between both the source text and the text translated. This action is taken because sometimes a translator translates a text into some different target texts although the source is one. As a sample is, prefix un- in SL is translated by Dina Begum in the translation of The Hound of the Baskerville novel into different words in TL that are tidak, tak, tanpa, tiada, and bukan. Therefore, the readers need to prove that translation is accurate or equivalent or not.

Moreover, the writer is only finding the shift of bound morpheme in the target language from morphemes to words and from morphemes to phrases. Then, the writer does not find the change or the shift of morphemes to clauses or morphemes to sentences in the target language.

4.2 Suggestion

Based on the analysis of this research, the writer has some suggestions for those who are interested in the translation field. First, the next researchers who take the similar topic with this research are better to apply other theories besides the theory of shifts in translation by Catford. It can be the theory of translation equivalent by Nida, translation theory by Newmark, and others. Second, the next researchers can find out for the other ways in proving the equivalent meaning of text translated beside using the dictionary or comparing the quality meaning of the text translated. One of this way is by using componential analysis. Then, it is better to the next researchers who take the similar topic with this research to create their thesis to be more specific. It can be produced by focusing on one or two bound morpheme to be analyzed to make the thesis become specific and deeper in analysis.

In addition, in the process of translation, we may or may not shift the bound morpheme. It is because all the languages around the world have their own systems or characters. Bound morpheme shifts can occur in translation in order to find out the equivalent in meaning between the source language and the target language. When bound morphemes in SL and TL have already the formal correspondence, so they need not be shifted.
